

At six years old André desired to become a Barrister. His journey began when his mother sought refuge from domestic violence which lead him, and his two sisters to the UK. Upon arrival they were homeless. André witnessed his mother's health quickly deteriorate, and as a result he often articulated to her healthcare professionals how she felt on her behalf. He believes in equipping people with the tools to overcome their obstacles when misunderstood.

André did well at secondary school despite battling ADHD, he went on to complete his A Levels and graduate with a Law degree at Southampton Solent University. During this time he went on to lead projects helping others achieve upward social mobility, through building schools in impoverished communities in Uganda, and community programs in London.

Managing nightclubs, bars and restaurants enabled André to be an excellent communicator. The creative approach André adopts towards his journey has allowed him to gain invaluable experience with Advocate and CAB simultaneously.

André is an example of how with resilience, hard work and an unwavering self-believe anyone can overcome struggles within the UK coming from the humble beginnings of Kingston, Jamaica to pursue their purpose. André plans to start the BPTC in September 2019.
